AMX301 Multicultural Studies: Appreciating and Valuing Differences

This module introduces student teachers to the implications of living in a diverse society—primarily through the prisms of “race” and ethnicity, but also through addressing issues of class, gender, and other social structures. In an increasingly complex world, understanding the dynamics suggested by multiracialism, multiculturalism and “cultural relativism” is an important step in gaining the necessary perspective of one’s relationship to community, society and the larger world.
